

Why Buy Flood Insurance After Wildfire?

1. You're at an increased risk for flooding.

It may seem odd that wildfires could increase your chances of flooding. Here is why wildfire increases flood risk:

With the rainy season upon us, these charred areas set the stage for flash flooding and mudslides. This threat returns during the spring, when snow melt from the mountains is not able to absorb into the ground.

2. Financial protection.

With many flood insurance options ranging from the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) to private options, there are policies available to meet your needs to help protect your home.

3. Peace-of-Mind.

Natural disasters are unpredictable and devastating. Flood protection can help ease that stress and give you freedom from the fear of “what if”.

It takes many seasons before the vegetation grows back and stabilizes the soil to start absorbing water again. This is an important element to factor in when planning your risk strategy with your insurance agent.
